Your guide to making a donation

Enhancing health services in Herefordshire

Wye Valley NHS Trust is always very appreciative of any donations.

Wye Valley NHS Trust receives government funding for healthcare, and aims to provide the best possible facilities, equipment and environment for our patients, services users, visitors and staff, but there is always more we can do to enhance the health services we provide.

We provide many health services across Herefordshire and the surrounding areas, including acute care and community services.

Each year generous companies and individuals help us to raise much-needed funds, and the Trust has benefited over several years from charitable donations.

How donations have helped

Contributions from grateful patients, service users, supportive members of the community and other charities have helped us to fund vital equipment such as the Trust's MRI scanner and even the development of parts of our estate such as the new cancer facility: The Macmillan Renton Unit.
